HEALTH NOTE
A diet high in sugar can contribute to a wide range of health conditions including heart disease, fatty liver disease and type 2 diabetes. This mostly applies to foods that provide little to no nutritional value, like candies, desserts and processed foods, "Meanwhile, natural sugars found in foods like fruits are not considered added sugars; these foods contain an assortment of important vitamins and minerals and should be a regular part of a healthy and balanced diet.

IRS will continue to be inspected as in the past.
